

Eversheds Sutherland plc – PMO Turnaround & Service Delivery

When I was first engaged by Eversheds Sutherland plc, the organisation's PMO delivery service was struggling to meet expectations — fragmented governance, inconsistent reporting, and limited stakeholder confidence.

My initial remit was clear: stabilise the PMO, restore delivery control, and rebuild trust across the business.

Turnaround Phase

I began by conducting a rapid assessment of PMO operations, identifying process gaps, governance weaknesses, and delivery inefficiencies.

Through structured intervention and stakeholder engagement, I introduced:

- A redefined PMO operating model aligned to business priorities
- Standardised governance and assurance frameworks
- Improved reporting accuracy and cadence

- Clear ownership and accountability across delivery streams

Within weeks, the PMO regained stability, visibility, and credibility — transforming from a reactive support function into a proactive delivery partner.

Stabilisation & Service Delivery

Following the successful turnaround, I was retained as PMO Manager to lead the service through its next phase — embedding maturity, consistency, and continuous improvement.

Key achievements included:

- Establishing a sustainable PMO service model
- Implementing performance metrics and KPI dashboards
- Enhancing stakeholder engagement and delivery assurance
- Driving continuous improvement and capability development

The PMO evolved into a trusted centre of excellence — enabling predictable outcomes, improved governance, and measurable business value.

Outcome

The engagement delivered a stable, high-performing PMO service that now underpins Eversheds Sutherland's project delivery capability.

What began as a turnaround became a long-term partnership — proof that with the right leadership, structure, and discipline, even a failing PMO can become a strategic enabler of success.
